PREFACE.

This Index to Dibdin's Edition of the Typographical Antiquities, or the History of Printing in England, Scotland and Ireland, originally compiled by Joseph Ames, is not a new work, but a reprint of one which exists, so far as is known, only in a single copy, that belonging to the library of Sion College, as to the provenance of which no information can be obtained. The Index has been reprinted at the suggestion of Mr. Gordon Duff, not because it is a good Index, but because the technical defects, which probably account for its never having been put into circulation, are not sufficiently serious to prevent its being a useful makeshift, the publication of which is quite worth the few pounds it has cost to print. Attempts were made to improve it here and there as it passed through the press, but it was found so difficult to alter in one place without altering in another, that it was ultimately decided to let it go forth in its original form.

It has only to be added that the references to Herbert's Edition are distinguished by being enclosed in round brackets.
